MEET YOUR DODGERS

BOARD OF STRATEGY

WALTER EMMONS ALSTON . . . (Born December 1, 1911 — Butler County, Ohio) . . . By winning his fifth National League pennant in the last eleven years, Walt stepped right up among the top managers in the circuit. John McGraw won ten pennants in twenty-eight years. Frank Chance won 4 in seven years with the Cubs, Bill Terry four in nine years with the Giants and Bill McKechnie won four pennants over a 22-year career with the Braves, Pirates, Cards and Reds. Alston's World Series record, four out of five, is, of course, the best N.L. mark. Twice under Alston the Dodgers lost the first two games in the October Classic and yet came on to win in seven games (1955 and 1965). The only time his Dodgers were beaten in World Series play (1956) it was the other way around. The Dodgers won the first two and then were beaten in seven. His other World Series wins were in 1959 (in six games over the Chisox) and 1963, the historic four-game sweep of the Yankees. Alston, a minor league first baseman from 1935 to 1947 and a manager, beginning 1940, moved up to the Dodgers in 1954 from Montreal. He heads into his thirteenth campaign in 1966 and no currently active pilot has been with the same club that long.

JAMES GILLIAM . . . (Born, November 17, 1928, Nashville, Tenn.) . . . You'll find Jim listed among the player "blurbs" in his proper alphabetical spot. Who'll bet he won't be back on the active list before the year is out?

PEDRO W. (PRESTON) GOMEZ . . . (Born April 20, 1924 — Central Preston, Oriente, Cuba) . . . Gomez got away from the Dodgers for a couple of years — 1963-64 — to manage in the Yankee farm system but the Dodgers were happy to bring him back into the fold last year when manager Walt Alston's staff underwent a shake-up. Preston proved a most valuable contributor to the success of the Dodgers in '65. Tremendously popular with the players, Gomez drew many volunteers for extra hours of practice and, certainly, much of the credit for the vast improvement of the Dodgers in defensive play this year goes to Gomez. In 1959 Gomez gained national prestige when he managed Havana to third place in the International League, won the play-offs and carried on to defeat Minneapolis for the Little World Series crown.

DANIEL LEONARD OZARK . . . (Born November 26, 1919 — Buffalo, N.Y.) . . . Like Manager Alston, Ozark spent most of his career as a slugger in the minor leagues. He also was a first baseman, starting with Olean, N.Y., in 1942. His baseball was immediately interrupted, however, by a military career which carried him into the thick of the Battle of the Bulge. Danny still has some shell fragments in his knee to remind him of the invasion of France. Ozark hit thirty-one homers and drove in 142 runs at Abilene, Texas, when he returned from Europe. Heavy hitting at Ft. Worth, St. Paul, Newport News and Elmira preceded his rise to a manager's post at Wichita Falls in 1956. He continued to manage Dodger farm teams — Cedar Falls, Macon, St. Paul, Omaha and Spokane — until called up to the Dodger staff last year. In '63 at Spokane, the Spokane Indians won the Pacific Coast League title under his leadership.

HAROLD (LEFTY) PHILLIPS . . . (Born May 16, 1919 — Los Angeles, California) . . . Lefty developed arm trouble in his first year of professional baseball but he immediately set out on a new career to stay in the game. He became one of baseball's finest scouts on the West Coast, working for both the Reds and the Dodgers, until he was moved to the Dodger coaching staff last year. Among the recent Dodgers signed by Phillips are Don Drysdale and Ron Fairly, of the club's current roster, and Larry Sherry and Bobby Lillis, now the property of Detroit and Houston, respectively. One of Lefty's most important duties in recent winters has been the management of the Dodgers' Instructional League teams in Arizona. With the Dodgers, of course, he is in complete charge of the club's great pitching staff.

PITCHERS

JIM BREWER . . . One wonders what sort of year Jim would have had in 1965 if he had not been plagued with an ailing elbow. When he was able to work he was one of the most effective pitchers in the league. In his forty-nine innings, spread over nineteen games, Brewer compiled an earned run average of 1.84. But Jim was on the disabled list from June 12 through July 21 and unable to pitch at all after September 4. Brewer came up with a new pitch — a fine screwball — in 1964 and earned some late-season starts. In his final effort that year he hurled his first complete game in the majors and, for good measure, flipped a four-hit shutout over the Houston Astros. Brewer was obtained from the Chicago Cubs for southpaw Dick Scott and fired his way on to the Dodger roster with some fine pitching during 1964 Spring training.

DICK CALMUS . . . When the Dodgers beat the St. Louis Cardinals down the 1963 pennant stretch Dick was a jubilant spectator most nights. But the young right-hander, kept on the Dodgers because of the first-year player rule, had enjoyed some moments of personal celebration earlier in the year. For instance, he beat the Giants twice in relief and also fired a great five innings against the Mets for another win. He had even been given a starting chance in August, against the Braves, but a line drive against one of his knees ruined that game for him. Nevertheless, Calmus impressed the Dodger brass as a fine prospect for the future and it was forecast he wouldn't stay long in the minors. Dick has had two so-so seasons since then, however, winning twelve for Albuquerque in 1964 and only six last season at Spokane. Now, at twenty-two, he's back for another shot at the big staff.

DON DRYSDALE . . . A workhorse with thoroughbred class! That's one way to describe Drysdale. In 1965 he worked more than 300 innings for the fourth straight year, started forty-two games, which gave him 40-or-more the four consecutive campaigns — and, with twenty-three victories, produced his 85th win since the Dodgers moved into their new ball park in 1962. Toss in a couple of triumphs in the World Series of 1963 and 1965 and you get the idea this guy knows a little about pitching — and winning. Don celebrates his 30th birthday in July by which time he should have 175 victories under his belt. Don't take this feat of pitching 300 innings in a season lightly. No one in the American League fired that many last season. Only Sandy Koufax, with 336, and Don, with 308, did it in the National. Only five other 1965 pitchers had ever hurled 300 innings, Koufax and Warren Spahn twice, Bob Friend and Juan Marichal once and Robin Roberts SIX times, 1950 through 1955. Drysdale, who won 25 games in 1962, seemed headed for at least that many last year when he had a 15-and-8 record July 19. Don ran into a bad month and didn't win another ball game until August 23. His left knee collapsed under him on a few occasions to add to his miseries—an old football injury. But, down the stretch, Drysdale was his usual dependable self, winning five of his last six starts. The only one he didn't win resulted from Ernie Banks driving him out of the ball game with a line drive against his right foot. And, just to make matters worse, the Dodgers had given Don a 3-to-0 lead in the first inning. That doesn't happen too often for Don. In his last four outings, after the Banks blast, Don allowed two earned runs in thirty-two innings and, with a 2.78 ERA for the year, brought his lifetime figure to 2.96. He is in a mighty select gathering among the few pitchers with career records under the 3.00 mark.

SKIP HANCOCK . . . Rated a fine chance among Dodger pitching prospects is young Skip Hancock, tall right-hander who split his first pro year between Santa Barbara and St. Petersburg and came up with a 2.37 ERA for the latter club. Hancock was signed by Ben Wade after being selected a baseball All-American at Arizona State. In his final season, as a sophomore with Arizona State, he fanned 162 batters in 107 innings and compiled a 12-and-1 record. He then went on to star for the Alaska Goldpanners and pitched in the National Semi-pro tourney at Wichita. At Camelback High (Phoenix, Arizona) he was All-State in his Senior season with a 10-and-1 record. Skip was signed for a substantial bonus by the Dodgers.

MIKE KEKICH . . . You've got to admit that Mike does some unusual things now and then. When he was married last Summer he visited Santa Barbara for a honeymoon and both he and his bride were injured, riding a motorcycle. Then, too, there was the fact he was thrown OUT of a Major League ball game even before he ever got into one. Seems one of the umpires didn't take kindly to the kid's bench-jockying. But Dodger talent experts think Mike also will be doing some unusual things on the field during his career. He has a fast ball reminiscent of the one with which Sandy Koufax brought into baseball and needs only experience to challenge for a regular starting job with the Dodgers. Kept with the club under the first-year player rule last year, Mike had come all the way from Santa Barbara to the majors, with stops at St. Petersburg and Spokane, in 1964. He got his first start last year against the Phillies in June. He didn't win. Wildness and a home run caught up with him but he had the thrill of registering a strikeout against the first batter he faced in the majors (Tony Taylor), fanned two in the first inning and five during 3⅓ rounds before he was lifted. You'll see a lot of this young man in the Dodger future.

Sandy Koufax Tops in Baseball

AWARDS . . . First pitcher to repeat as Cy Young Award winner (1963-'65), Sandy also was declared top professional athlete (Hickock Diamond Belt Award) for second time, won the Sports Illustrated "Sportsman of the Year" honor and was named Player of the Year by Sporting News and Male Athlete of the Year by Associated Press.

MAJOR LEAGUE LEADER . . . Led both leagues in ERA (2.04), strikeouts (382), victories (26), innings pitched (336), complete games (27) and W.L. (26-8-.765).

STRIKEOUTS . . . His 382 all-time tops for a season. Increased his own N.L. record to five straight years with 200-or-more strikeouts (starting with 1961: 269, 216, 306, 223, 382—1,396 in 1,310 innings). His career total: 2,079 in 2,033 innings. He has fanned 10-or-more batters in 82 games. He is only pitcher who has ever fanned 18 batters in TWO different games. (Only one other pitcher, Bob Feller, ever fanned 18 in a 9-inning game.)

COMPLETE GAMES . . . 27 complete games was most by a Dodger pitcher since Burleigh Grimes and Dazzy Vance hurled 30, each, in 1924. No southpaw in N.L. has pitched more complete games since Wilbur Cooper, of Pirates, in 1921. Also most complete games in N.L. since Robin Roberts' 29 in 1954.

VICTORIES . . . Victory total of 26 tied N.L. record for southpaw, matching two Giants' pitchers, Rube Marquard (26-11 in 1912) and Carl Hubbell (26-6 in 1936).

ERA AND W-L LEADER . . . Sandy's 2.04 ERA and .765 (26 and 8) percentage record made him first pitcher in N.L. history to win both of these titles two successive seasons. Sandy has been the circuit's ERA leader four straight years — a National League record.

NO-HITTERS . . . Became first pitcher to hurl FOUR no-hitters. Has done it annually since 1962. To add to this year's accomplishments, Sandy made it a perfecto Sept. 9 against Chicago Cubs.

WORLD SERIES . . . Won fifth and seventh game in World Series, hurling 2-to-0 shutout in finale. His four October classic triumphs ties lifetime record of Johnny Podres for all-time Dodger high.

BOB MILLER . . . In his three years as a Dodger, Bob has never had an earned run average over the 3.00 mark — 2.89 in 1963, 2.61 in 1964 and 2.97 last year. His composite E.R.A. for the three campaigns — 2.82. And that is spread over an amazing total of 177 games in his three Dodger seasons. In 1964 Bob pitched in seventy-four games, tying what was then the National League record for games pitched. Last season, however, the Cubs' Ted Abernathy went slightly berserk, appearing in eighty-four games as a relief pitcher. When the Dodgers ran into a shortage of starting pitchers in late July, Miller got a call against Milwaukee but was tagged with a defeat. In late June he had relieved Nick Willhite in the first inning and went 8⅔ innings, defeating the Cubs. A pulled elbow muscle slowed down Bob in late August and he was on the sidelines for two weeks. He pitched three times during the club's 13-game winning streak which just about sewed up the pennant and his save in an 11-inning 7-6 thriller over the Braves September 22. A big one, it was the sixth game of the string and four days later the Dodgers had moved into a tie with the Giants for first place.

JOE MOELLER . . . This could be the year Joe lives up to his tremendous early promise. Back in 1961, when he was a fledgling of eighteen, the big right-hander fired his way from Reno to Spokane via Greenville, fanned 295 batters in 237 innings and walked only 84. Given an early-season shot with the Dodgers in 1962, Joe got off to a 6-and-5 start and seemed ready to make the majors as one of the youngest pitchers in Dodger history. Then his control deserted him and Joe was shipped to Omaha. Injuries have plagued him since. In Spring training and twice during the season mishaps set him back. In 1964, when he was up with the Dodgers again he suffered a dislocated left shoulder when he took a wild swing as a batter during practice. Breaking up a tussle between two team mates last season in Spokane he again suffered a shoulder injury. If he can duck injuries this year, he'll be one of the top contenders for the No. 4 pitching spot behind Koufax, Drysdale and Osteen.

CLAUDE OSTEEN . . . Winner of fifteen games near the bottom of the American League in 1964 and fifteen games at the top of the National League in 1965, Osteen, with more robust hitting support, would have been in the 20-victory category without much difficulty. Claude scored nine of his fifteen Dodger victories after the All-Star Game and was one of the vital factors in the club's late rush to the National League flag. During the 13-game winning streak which just about clinched things, the stylish southpaw started four games and the Dodgers won all of them although he was personally credited with only two victories, a pair of shutouts, 2 to 0 and 5 to 0. He also was charged with the defeat which wound up the streak — this time the shutout going the other way, 2 to 0. The Dodgers won the pennant the next day, however, and then Osteen enjoyed the biggest thrill of his baseball career. After Don Drysdale and Sandy Koufax were beaten in the first two World Series games, the burden of keeping the Dodgers alive was placed squarely on Osteen's shoulders. He did mighty well, flipping a 5-hit shutout, 4 to 0. He also got a single, himself. So, the deal for Osteen, which also brought slick-fielding John Kennedy to the Dodgers and sent Frank Howard, Pete Richert, Ken McMullen, Dick Nen and Phil Ortega to the Senators, proved a success. The Dodgers couldn't have won the pennant without Claude — and that goes for the World Series, too.

RON PERRANOSKI . . . Today's toughest pitcher to score earned runs against is the Dodgers' bullpen ace, Ron Perranoski. A survey of all pitchers — relievers or starters — who have hurled at least five hundred major league innings showed that none can match Ron's 5-year ERA of 2.48. Only once during his Dodger career has Ron gone over the 3.00 mark in this vital department. Ron was at his parsimonious best when the Dodgers needed him last year — down the stretch! After a so-so start which brought up rumors that Perranoski would be traded, the sinker-ball southpaw made a notable comeback. From August 7 through September 28, his final appearance, he was in 21 games, spun 47⅔ innings, allowed 24 hits, three runs (only two earned) and posted an ERA of 0.38. During the 13-game streak which won the flag, Perranoski worked 20⅔ innings and didn't give up an earned run, appearing in SIX winning games out of the thirteen. The game Ron — and the Dodgers — point to as the turning point of 1965 occured on Sept. 22 when the Braves bombed Sandy Koufax to cover on six quick runs. But the Dodgers bounced back, won it, 7 to 6, and Ron hurled six shutout innings and got the eleven-inning win. That was victory No. 6 in the Dodgers' late surge. A few days later they were in first place to stay.

JOHNNY PODRES . . . Still on the comeback trail following elbow surgery in 1964, Johnny hopes to win the No. 4 spot in the Dodger pitching rotation this year. Johnny, dean of the Dodger staff, had a shot at that role in '65 and was being given starts regularly as late as mid-August. When he lost five straight decisions, however, Podres was taken out of the pitching routine and asked to join the bullpen corps. In his last six assignments, four in relief, Johnny won three games and concluded the season with a 7-and-6 record. In 1955 Johnny pitched the Dodgers to their first World Championship with two victories in the October Classic, including a 2-to-0 finale. World Series triumphs in 1959 and 1963 gave him a four-win total which no Dodger matched until Koufax won the fifth and seventh games this year. In his last six appearances in 1965 Podres fired 18 innings, gave up four runs and compiled an ERA of 2.00. There are many who feel Johnny found a brand new role.

MIKE PRICE . . . When Kenny Myers managed the El Centro Club in the old Sunset League, he befriended a man who said he'd have a major leaguer for him some day. He was talking about Michael George Price and, sure enough, the kid has made the Spring roster of 1966 with the Dodgers — and Myers got to sign him. Mike is a 6-3, 185-pound left-handed pitcher who was used mostly in relief last season at Pocatello and won four games for Tommy Lasorda. A total of 102 strikeouts in 67 innings is significant. Mike played for Montclair (Calif.) High where he won MVP honors and also played for the national American Legion champions from Upland. He has attended Upland College and Cal Poly at Pomona. His biggest interest, outside baseball, is the study of criminology.

JOHN PURDIN . . . The first-year player rule kept John with the Dodgers and helped him earn a World Series share. But the ex-U.S. Airman probably would have been more contented getting in some pitching with a minor league club. Instead, he had to remain with the club and then, for the second successive winter, played in the Arizona Instructional League. Purdin, signed by Dodger Scout Cliff Alexander without even performing in a game for Cliff, came to the Dodgers on a fan's tip. Matter of fact Dodger prexy Walter O'Malley received two letters, advising the Dodgers to watch for the chance to sign this boy after his Air Force discharge. His fine record in Weisbaden, Germany, tabbed John for future stardom in pro ball. Before he went into the service the Detroit Tigers owned him but released him after a look. In his first pro year Purdin won fourteen games at Salisbury and two with the Dodgers, including a two-hit shutout. He had a 2-and-1 record with Los Angeles in 1965, appearing in eleven games.

HOWIE REED . . . The Dodger pennant victory in 1965 was the result of many players making contributions — some large, some small. Howie Reed was a valuable performer in relief for Walt Alston but his outstanding pitching job was as a starter August 7 against Cincinnati. The Dodgers were experiencing a so-so road trip when Howie, used in an emergency against the tough-and-ready Reds, went seven innings, gave up only six hits and won, 5 to 3, to keep the Dodgers in first place by a game. Earlier in the season, also against Cincinnati, Howie hurled 5⅓ shutout innings in an important 4-0-3 win. On another occasion he went 5⅔ against the Pirates, allowed one run and was the winning pitcher. He took part in two extra-inning games which the Dodgers won during the late-season 13-game skein and was the winning pitcher Sept. 28 in twelve innings — once more against those Reds. That 2-to-1 victory, incidentally, just about knocked Cincinnati out of the pennant race and gave the Dodgers a lead over the Giants they never relinquished.

PHIL REGAN . . . Just before the 1965 deadline for interleague deals without waivers, Buzzie Bavasi and Jim Campbell, General Managers, respectively, of the Dodgers and Tigers, swung a trade which sent utility infielder Dick Tracewski to Detroit and brought right-handed pitcher Phil Regan to the West Coast. Seeking to bolster his staff of starting pitchers, Bavasi reasoned he was set in the extra-infielder category with Pee Wee Oliver, Bart Shirley and, if necessary, Jim Gilliam. Regan, who had experienced some trouble the last two seasons at Detroit, won 36, while losing 25 in 1961-'62-'63. He had a 15 and 9 record, his best in the majors, in 1963 when he also had his best E.R.A., 3.86.

BILL SINGER . . . An outstanding candidate to join the regular Dodger starters is Bill Singer, fireballing right hander from Pomona, who led the Pacific Coast League in complete games (17) last season. Bill won fourteen games for a last-place team and, what was more important, hurled 211 innings. Bill had experienced various injuries to keep his performance record down in earlier years. Bill played American Legion ball for Post No. 30 (Pomona) and pitched that team to runner-up honors in 1959 and to the state championship in 1961. Signed to a $50,000 bonus contract by Lefty Phillips and Kenny Myers, Bill had a 20-and-4 record in high school, Legion and Dodger Rookie Club seasons. He fanned 136 batters in 127 innings his first year in pro ball (Reno) and 90 in ninety-five innings in his second campaign. He needs only consistency to become a topnotch Dodger.

DON SUTTON . . . Let's examine Don's first-year record a bit. Thirty-one games, thirty-one starts and twenty-four complete games in his two leagues (California and Texas League). A total of 258 innings pitched and 247 strike-outs including a play-off game. Twenty-three victories during regular-season play and another in post-season action. Only seven defeats and earned run averages of 1.50 and 2.78 in his two leagues. Now, let's talk a little about his style of pitching. According to those who have scouted him, Don may be ready for the big leagues in his SECOND pro year. Biggest asset: control. "He can curve you at 3 and 2 and get the ball over," say rival scouts. Signed by Leon Hamilton, the youngster pitched for the Sioux Falls Packers in the semi-pro Basin League and had an ERA of 2.20, fanning 96 batters in 82 innings. In the National Baseball Congress tourney at Wichita, Kansas, he won three of the four games won by the Wyoming Colts, Michigan semi-pro champions, had a 1.96 ERA and was named to the N.B.C. All-American team. And, in his first pro year, Don went all the way from Santa Barbara to the Dodgers, finishing up with the big club during their pennant run. On the way he won Topps Awards in both the California and Texas Leagues, including Class AA All-West honors.

NICK WILLHITE . . . Nick started the season in Spring training with the Washington Senators (on a trial basis) and wound up with the World Champions. Enroute, he stopped off at Spokane, hurled a 1-hit shutout over Oklahoma City and won another shot with the Dodgers when Jim Brewer was placed on the disabled list. In his first win with the Dodgers, Willhite went 8⅓ innings against the Phillies and, with an assist from Ron Perranoski, turned in a shutout victory. Nick has been a brilliant pitcher at times during his career. Signed by Bert Wells, he broke in (at Reno — 1960) with a 3-hit shutout, fanning fourteen batters. In 1961, pitching for Greenville in the Sally League, he won 16 and had a 1.80 ERA. He led the American Association with eighteen victories in 1962 and was compiling a fine record at Spokane when called up to the Dodgers in 1963.

DALE WILLIAMS . . . One of the performers in last Winter's Arizona Instructional League play was Carol Dale Williams, tall right-hander who was signed by Red Adams in Fresno back in 1961. He and staffmate Mike Price should be roomies. Mike's studying criminology during the off-season and Williams is a "Private Eye" when not on the diamond. Williams had a 29-4 scholastic record and pitched four one-hitters and a perfect game in his senior year. Neither his won-and-lost nor earned run records in professional baseball are impressive but scouts insist he is a major league prospect. An older brother, Freeman Williams, pitched in the Kansas City organization.

BATTERS

JIMMY CAMPANIS . . . Son of the Dodgers' Director of Scouting, Al Campanis, the sturdy young catcher has moved up to a major league shot after four years in the minors. His bat power stamps him as a fine prospect. Jimmy, a football and baseball star at Fullerton High, led the 1962 Florida State League catchers in fielding and had a pair of .300 years at bat with Salem in 1963 and 1964. Advanced to Albuquerque last year, he had twenty-one extra base hits among his seventy safeties. In high school Jimmy hit .420, in American Legion ball .400 and with the Dodger Rookies .444. He played Winter Ball at Nicaragua by way of tuning up for his first big league trial.

WILLIE CRAWFORD . . . A .300-plus batting average in the Arizona Instructional League last Winter added strength to the Dodgers' belief that Willie Crawford, their $100,000 bonus outfielder, is the slugger they've been seeking ever since Duke Snider, Gil Hodges, Roy Campanella & Co. concluded playing careers. Harnessed to a major league bench by the since rescinded first-year player rule, Willie saw action only as a pinch runner and pinch hitter with the Dodgers last season and went to bat a mere forty-three times, hardly enough to test his batting acumen. In 1964 at Santa Barbara he hit .326, blasting sixteen doubles, five triples and six homers. A graduate of Fremont High, Willie was a track star as well as an outstanding baseball player. He was clocked at 9.7 for the hundred and 21.4 for the furlong. In the broad jump he stretched out to 25 feet 1½ inches. Just about every club in baseball tried to sign Crawford and Charley Finley, Kansas City owner, paid him a personal last-minute visit in an attempt to swing him to the Athletics.

TOMMY DAVIS . . . A crowd of more than 50,000 fans was shocked into silence last May 1 when Tommy Davis, twice the batting champion of the majors, slid toward second base and suffered a fracture and dislocation of his right ankle. "I thought there would be a play on me and I tried a new kind of slide. The next thing I knew my ankle was out in right field." Trainer Wayne Anderson corrected the dislocation right out there at second base but, of course, there was no way Tommy could come back again to help the Dodgers' pennant drive. He suited up late in the year, hit one ground ball in the final game of the year and then served as a pinch-hitter for most of the Winter Arizona Instructional League season. Tommy, who led both leagues with batting averages of .346 in 1962 and .326 in 1963, was the youngest man ever to defend a major league hitting crown. Now, with a .303 lifetime batting average, he's fighting for his old Dodger job.

WILLIE DAVIS . . . If Willie continues his career habit of following a so-so season with a good one, this may be one of his best years. He led the Pacific Coast League in 1960 at .346 and hit .318 in a brief whirl with the Dodgers late in the year, only to drop to a .254 average in his first full major league campaign. The Dodgers didn't win the pennant in '62 but Willie almost put them in the October Classic when he hit 18 doubles, 10 triples and 21 home runs and batted .285. It seemed a certainty he'd come on to his promised stardom in 1963 but, even on a championship club, Willie dropped to .245. He enjoyed his best major league campaign in 1964, thanks to a late-season surge, but he dropped from that year's .294 to a .238 figure in '65. While he has had his ups and downs as a batter, Willie has improved steadily as a fielder and he has turned in some of the greatest defensive gems in Dodger outfielding history. The Dodgers are hoping he puts it all together in '66.

TOMMY DEAN . . . When Tommy went to high school — Iuka, Miss., population 1,527 — his brother, Scotty, helped build a ball field and convinced the basketball coach to add baseball to the school's athletic curriculum. Word of Tommy's fielding ability got around and, by the time he reached his senior year, major league scouts came a-running. Among them was the Dodgers' Hugh Alexander who wrote out a check for $60,000. Tommy insisted on splitting it with his brother, Scotty, which seemed appropriate enough. Buzzie Bavasi tabbed Dean as the best fielding young shortstop he had seen since Pee Wee Reese, high praise, indeed. Maury Wills enthusiastically assisted Tommy during the Arizona Instructional League season of 1964-'65. In his first season Dean hit .224 in the Florida State League at St. Petersburg. He moved up to the Texas League and hit .268 for Albuquerque. That's a good sign — a better average in a higher classification. The Dodgers think Tommy will continue to improve.

JIMMIE FAIREY . . . That search for added Dodger power may be answered when young Jimmie Fairey becomes a regular member of the Dodgers. In his rookie year in organized baseball (at Santa Barbara) he not only batted .323 but socked two dozen doubles, five triples and twenty homers. In his last year at Erskine College he batted .406, drove in 31 runs in 32 games, led the NCAA College division with 11 homers and 7 triples and had a fantastic .828 slugging average. Twice picked on the All-American nine, Fairey then played semi-pro baseball for Rapid City, South Dakota, before the Dodgers' Leon Hamilton signed him to a Dodger contract. A native of Orangeburg, S.C., Jimmie lettered in football and track in addition to starring on the diamond.

RON FAIRLY . . . You have a choice of nicknames for Ron. Call him "Mr. Clutch" or "Mr. Consistency." He's both. With runners aboard, Ron is twice the hitter he is when he is out there alone. And his RBI record certainly has been steady — year after year. Over the last four he has batted in 71-77-74-70. The ex-USC redhead has been with three World Championship clubs — 1959, 1963 and 1965. But it wasn't until '65 that he got much of a chance to do some hitting in the World Series. He had only four October Classic batting appearances — and no hits — before last Autumn's binge with the Twins. Then, Ron hit safely in all seven games, tied Maury Wills for the high total of eleven hits, scored the most runs (7), tied Lou Johnson for the home run lead (2), paced both clubs in RBIs at six and, at .379, had the best batting average for a seven-game performer. Considering the fact Ron had wrestled with a batting slump, brought on by a bruised thumb, for the last month of the season, this World Series was a most gratifying climax to his '65 campaign.

AL FERRARA . . . Sought by several clubs during the Winter trading sessions but retained as added right-handed batting strength and outfield security, Ferrara makes his third bid to remain with the Dodgers. Sent back to Spokane in mid-season last year he hit a most respectable .307 down the stretch for the Indians and thirty-five of his sixty-nine hits were for extra bases, giving him a slugging average of .582. Al, who gave up a musical career for baseball, has been with the Dodger organizatoin since 1959. He hit .352 in 1960 at Reno, .321 at Spokane in 1963 and enjoyed his third .300-plus campaign after being dropped back to the minors last year. Sometimes known as "The Bull" because of his great strength, Ferrara has been a consistent home run hitter in the minors. A major league circuit smash he'll never forget was stroked last year against Dick Ellsworth, the only hit Dick allowed in a mid-May joust at Dodger Stadium. Ellsworth went into the Dodger eighth with a 1-0 lead and a no-hitter. Al hit his pinch homer with two aboard thanks to an error and a fielder's choice. The Cubs lost it, 3 to 1.

JIM GILLIAM . . . If you don't mind, we'll run Jim's "blurb" among the players once again this year. Officially, he starts Spring Training as a coach but that was the set-up last year, too, only to have "The Devil" play a most vital role in the winning of another N.L. pennant and another World Championship for Los Angeles. And who'll ever forget the play Jim made in the final game of the October Classic when he scooped Zoillo Versalles' hot grounder over third base and jogged to the bag to force Frank Quilici for the second out of the fifth. The Dodgers were leading, 2 to 0, when the play was made but the Twins had two aboard and Sandy Koufax was in trouble. That was all Mr. K. needed, homever. Only one more Twin reached base thereafter. That also was Gilliam's last play in the Series — and, if his retirement to coaching ranks sticks, the last play of his active career. After the ball game, Jim's glove was turned over to the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., where it became a vital part of the fast-growing Dodger display in baseball's Museum.

DERRELL GRIFFITH . . . Back for another fling at the majors, Griffith, at twenty-two, is considered one of the better left-handed hitting prospects in the Dodger system. Capable of playing either the infield or the outfield, he was in considerable demand during the Winter trading period but Buzzie Bavasi liked his bat, too, and decided to keep him with the Dodgers. Griffith has an over-all major-minor lifetime batting average of .293 with a good sprinkling of extra-base blasts. Another notable thing about Derrell's hitting is the fact he is becoming a tough batter to fan. Last season in the Pacific Coast League Griffith went down on strikes only 23 times in 467 times at bat while hitting .280. In four years of baseball Griffith has played second, short, third and the outfield. The Dodgers will try to find his best defensive spot this year.

TOM HUTTON . . . Among the nominees for the Win Clark Award in 1965, Hutton had a fine first year in professional ranks when he blasted twenty home runs and hit .294 at Santa Barbara in the California League. This is the sort of punch the Dodgers are seeking and they've got Tom tabbed in the club's future book as a bright prospect. A native Angeleno and a graduate of South Pasadena High, Tom was twice named to the All-C.I.F. baseball teams and, in his senior year, to All-C.I.F. in basketball. After his American Legion career, Tom played for the Dodger Rookies team, batting .460. He was then signed to a professional contract by Tom Lasorda and Ben Wade. An uncle, Bill Seinsoth, pitched in pro ball. During the off-season Hutton is continuing his education at Pasadena City College.

LOU JOHNSON . . . A .259 hitter gets a special citation at City Hall! Well, you just had to be Lou Johnson of 1965 to merit that — and merit it he did. There were plenty of reasons why Lou didn't hit more than .259. He was almost killed by a fast ball which crushed his protective helmet. But that only sidelined him a day or two. A broken thumb was more costly and really set his batting average on a toboggan. Nevertheless, Lou just refused to give in to all his mishaps and down the stretch was one of the big reasons the Dodgers won the pennant. Let's just quote Sandy Koufax on the subject: "Johnson's the guy. If it had not been for the job he did, we might not be here today." Lou, after having seen his contract bounced around seventeen times from 1953 through 1965, came up to the Dodgers to replace Tommy Davis, who had broken and dislocated his right ankle in a May 1 slide into second base. Lou wasted no time at all getting into the spotlight. Five days after he arrived, his 10th-inning homer beat Houston. Three days later he was beaned and hospitalized. Soon after his return he and Al Ferrara collided heavily in left center. On June 12 Al Jackson fractured his right thumb. But the Cinderella Man of 1965 wouldn't quit. In the Dodgers' late drive Johnson propelled one key hit after another — a home run which beat the Giants in the 15th, a single to top the Braves, 7 to 6, in the 11th after Milwaukee had bombed Sandy Koufax for six early runs, and a single to beat the Reds in the twelfth. In the last four games of the 13-game streak which just about clinched the pennant, Lou made TEN HITS in eighteen times at bat — .556. And in the pennant-clinching game (Oct. 2) who carried the winning run over the plate for Koufax? Or in the seventh game of the World Series, who hit the home run to give Sandy all he needed to beat the Twins? Don't ask.

JOHN KENNEDY . . . After playing as a full-fledged regular with the Washington Senators in 1964 and coming to the Dodgers in one of the bigger deals of recent years, it was somewhat surprising to find John in the Arizona INSTRUCTIONAL League last Winter. He was there to see what could be done about improving his hitting. The Dodgers still hold him in high regard as a fielder and hope he can beef up his offensive skills sufficiently this year to gain the National League spotlight his artistry with the glove dictates. Whether Kennedy plays third or second base for the Dodgers they'll have one of the game's top defensive stars. For years they have had their woes at third but Kennedy showed them last year the best "glove" they've seen there since Billy Cox. Unfortunately they needed heavier hitting and he was used, mostly, as a late-inning defensive replacement. A sore arm and a sore leg hampered him in Spring training in 1965 but the .370 he hit in Arizona during the Winter could be the first big step on the way back for the Chicago redhead who, at 25, still must be rated in the "prospect" field. This could be his year to make it big.

JIM LEFEBVRE . . . Sixth Dodger to be selected as Rookie of the Year in the National League since the first vote was taken back in 1947, Jim will be the first to receive the new Ford Frick Plaque to symbolize that honor. A batboy when the Dodgers played in the Coliseum, Jim sparked the Dodgers' pennant drive when his bat began to smoke in the club's redhot September push. For the month of September he hit .321 and drove in twenty runs for a season total of sixty-nine. In the 13-game winning streak (Sept. 16-30) which propelled the Dodgers from third place (4½ games back) past both the Reds and Giants, Jim hit .333, drove in 10 tallies and sent the winning run clattering home four times. Then, in the World Series, he was hitting .400 when he bruised his heel at home plate and was forced to the sidelines the rest of the Series. Lefebvre, a graduate of Morningside High in Inglewood, has been in the Dodger system since 1962 (Reno). He wasn't even on the Dodger roster when the club went into Spring training in '65. He fought his way on to the roster with a great Spring, however. A switch-hitter with power, he hit 21 doubles, 4 triples and tied Lou Johnson for club honors via a dozen homers.

PEE WEE OLIVER . . . Nate hopes the Los Angeles-Spokane shuttle has stopped running — for him, at least. For the last three seasons he has divided his campaigns between these two cities but, while the Dodgers have been in two World Series during that span, Oliver hasn't been on a championship roster yet. Pee Wee, whose dad played professional baseball and taught him the game, starred in football, basketball, track and baseball at Gibbs High in St. Petersburg, Fla., then the Spring camp of the New York Yankees. After some fine success in sandlot baseball for the St. Petersburg Braves and the Texas Steers, Oliver was sought by the Yankees and other clubs but signed by Dodger Scout Leon Hamilton. The fact that Oliver's baseball idol was Pee Wee Reese, from whom he took his nickname, made Leon's job a bit easier. Oliver hit .317 with Spokane in 1962 to earn his first trial with the Dodgers and a .314 mark in the second half of 1963 brought him back again the following Spring just as Jim Gilliam had predicted. Gilliam, Oliver's roomie in those days, was also his strongest booster. Then, when Jim took over at second base, Oliver was back on that Spokane shuttle again. "But he'll be back up here and he'll stay in the majors," Gilliam forecast. That's a prediction Oliver hopes will bear fruit in '66.

WES PARKER . . . When the Dodgers went into Spring Training in 1965 there was some question whether Wes Parker would stay with the ball club. He had shown considerable ability in 1964 when he was tied to the club as a first-year man. But could he make it on his own? Given an open shot at first base when the trading of Frank Howard sent Ron Fairly to right field, Wes made the most of his opportunity. He put in many hours of extra work, both at the plate and at first base, and the effort paid off. Wes was the top fielding first baseman in the National League last year with a percentage of .997. In 1,534 chances during the year, Wes made only five errors. Parker was above the .300 mark in late May and did a fine job as the No. 2 hitter, behind Maury Wills, until Jim Gilliam came out of retirement to take over his old spot in the batting order. Down the stretch when the pennant race reached the nerve-jangling stage, Skipper Walt Alston was pleased that his two infielding youngsters, Parker and Jim Lefebvre, were among his steadiest performers. It augurs well for the future of both.

BILL PARLIER . . . One of the most encouraging developments in the Dodgers' minor league system last Summer was the improvement of brawny Bill Parlier at the bat. This switch-hitting husky needs only to move his batting average into the .280s and he'll be a major league prospect. He hit .225 for both Albuquerque and Salisbury in 1964, his second year as a professional player, and last year with Albuquerque and Salem he batted .270 and .271, respectively. Even with that .225 average at Salisbury, Bill led the league in home runs (20) in only sixty-one games. Last year he hit four at Albuquerque and thirteen in Salem. In three minor league seasons he has hit sixty-seven, exclusive of Winter play. A football star as well as a baseball star in high school (three years at Mojave and one at Lynwood), Bill received grid scholarship offers from U.S.C., Washington and Arizona State but never entertained thoughts of becoming a college football player.

JOHN ROSEBORO . . . Despite injuries which would have floored less durable athletes, Roseboro got into more games (136) last year than any season in his major league career. Early in the year he was sidelined by a balky right knee and later by a strained back but the most unusual injury John sustained occurred when Juan Marichal, the Giants star right-hander, hit him over the head with a bat during the heat of the pennant race in August. After missing a few days of action as the result of this altercation, Roseboro came booming back with an eleven-game hitting streak during which he batted .450 and drove in six runs. A nine-year veteran in the National League, John slipped by the 1,000-game mark last season. He has taken part in three World Series, 1959, 1963 and 1965, catching every game in each October Classic. After the '65 season Roseboro was appointed by Los Angeles Police Chief William H. Parker as a Community Relations Specialist.

BART SHIRLEY . . . The demise of the first-year player rule which kept untried youngsters on major league benches the last few years is the best news which has come Bart Shirley's way in some time. With a bit more roster room, Shirley likely will get a chance to stay in the majors. Capable of playing second, short or third, Bart will vie with his Spokane team mate, Pee Wee Oliver, for the utility infielder's role with the champions. Could be they'll both make it. Shirley, a former football star for the University of Texas, was obtained by the Dodgers in a bidding competition with San Francisco, Detroit, Boston and Houston. In collegiate baseball he hit .353 as a freshman and .345 as a soph, when Texas won 21, lost 2 and grabbed the Southwest title.

JEFF TORBORG . . . Long after Sandy Koufax had hurled his fourth annual No-hit, No-Run game — a September 9 perfecto against the Chicago Cubs — his catcher, Jeff Torborg, nudged his way through the crowd of photographers, newspapermen and sportscasters and, like any other idol-worshiper, sought Sandy's autograph on a baseball. Jeff has always insisted that the first time he pulled on a Dodger uniform was the top thrill of his career but catching Sandy's perfect game just has to be his all-time highlight. Behind the plate because Skipper Walt Alston tried to rest John Roseboro now and then against left-handed pitchers, Torborg caught a game which brought sincere congratulations from Sandy. "I didn't have to shake him off very often," said Sandy. Imagine the kid's mounting thrill as Koufax got into that blazing mood over the last two innings. Jeff made all the putouts as Sandy mowed down Santo, Banks, Brown, Krug, Amalfitano and, finally, Harvey Kuenn. After Harvey swung at the last one, Torborg almost made the mound in two jumps. "I didn't do anything but catch the ball all night, but what a thrill," Torborg told reporters in the clubhouse. "I dropped one pitch but that was a curve in the dirt. Sandy had command all the time." A graduate of Rutgers University and a high-bonus pick by the Dodgers, Jeff should see a great deal more action this year. He showed vast improvement both at and behind the plate last year.

HECTOR VALLE . . . Serving as the No. 3 catcher on a staff headed by sturdy John Roseboro isn't going to get a man a great deal of exercise — and that was Hector Valle's biggest problem last year. He was with the Dodgers from opening day through mid-July and returned from Spokane again in September. But he got into only nine games and played five times that many games in a two-months visit to the Pacific Coast League. A native of Vega Baja, Puerto Rico, Valle was signed into the Dodger farm system in 1960 by Manchile Concepcion. He led Midwest League catchers in double plays in 1960 and was named California League All-Star catcher (at Reno) in 1961. He earned his major league trial with a .297 average at Albuquerque in 1964 when he was the best catcher in the Texas League.

MAURY WILLS . . . A hemorrhage settled in Maury's right leg last Fall and ruined whatever chance he had of breaking his fantastic stolen base record of 104, set in 1962. He says, barring injury, he'll be shooting at a new mark in '66. Wills has led the National League in basepath larceny six straight years, In his 6½ years with the Dodgers Maury has stolen 383 bases. The old Dodger club record was 232, established by Pee Wee Reese over a 16-year career. An oddity in Maury's 1965 thievery is the fact he stole the same number of bases at home as on the road. Maury, who was the Most Valuable Player in the National League in 1962 and finished third in the '65 polls, led the Dodgers last season in games played (158), at-bats (650), runs (92), hits (186) steals (94) and batting average (.286). In a major league career postponed by nine years of wandering around the minors, Maury has set a stolen base record which may never be equalled, won the MVP award, played on three World Championship Clubs, performed in five All-Star games and has been chosen as a captain of his team. But if you don't think Wills is seeking added laurels for himself and his Dodgers in 1966, you just don't Dig Maury!

STOLEN BASES — 1965

The Dodgers, with 172 steals, led the majors. Only one other club in the National League —St. Louis—totaled 100 thefts. It marked the eighth successive season and 17th time in 20 years that the Dodgers have led the N.L. in steals. The stolen base and caught-stealing records of the 1965 Dodgers follow:

WILLS ADDS TO N.L. STEAL MARK — 1960-1965

Wills added to his N.L. record in 1965 when he won the stolen base crown for the sixth straight season. Prior to Maury, no player in league history had won more than four successive titles. Pittsburgh's Max Carey holds the all-time N.L. theft mark, winning on 10 different occasions. With 94 steals, Wills easily outdistanced his closest competition—the Cards' Lou Brock (63), and the Astros' Jimmy Wynn (43). Wills now has 383 thefts in seven years with Los Angeles. Former club record belonged to Pee Wee Reese, who had 232 thefts during his 16 years with the Dodgers. Listed below is a breakdown of Wills' record-setting six-year basepath spree.
